Dear Belinfante,

Thanks for your letter of 5 October. My failure to react so far to your last letter is due to the fact that when it arrived I had left Copenhagen for a longer trip abroad, from which I have only just returned. I have only cursorily glanced at your letter, and I can already see that I see your point concerning Everett. I must, however, think a bit more about the problem, and I shall write to you next week without fail.

I am very sorry for the inconvenience that I unwittingly caused you.

With best wishes,

Yours,

L. Rosenfeld
